

Take your language studies abroad this summer!

Spanish

Students can choose between programs at Universidad de Salamanca in Spain or Universidad San Ignacio de Loyola (USIL) in Cusco, Peru. Students who already have a beginning level of Spanish can participate in the faculty-led Summer Program in Spain or Spanish through Community Engagement in Costa Rica where they'll learn from UNCG professors.

French

Students can choose to study at Université de Savoie in Chambéry or Jean Moulin Lyon 3 in Lyon, both in France. The Savoie program includes multiple levels, including beginning French, and combines classroom hours with cultural experiences. The program at Jean Moulin is for students with a level of FREN 203 or above, and includes a two-day trip to the Mediterranean.

German

The summer program at the University of Stuttgart in Germany is a great opportunity for students who have had little or no exposure to German to experience immersion in German language and culture. Students can enroll in a German language course, as well as subject courses, including architecture, business, and art history.

American Sign Language

Siena School for Liberal Arts in Italy has offered a summer program in Deaf Studies since 2005. This unique program is great for SES students or who have completed SES 204, or ASL minors who have obtained level ASL IV. Taught completely in ASL, students will use their skills to explore Italian Sign Language and Deaf Culture.

Italian

The Lorenzo de Medici Institute offers Italian language classes at each of their three campuses in Tuscany, Florence, and Rome, all in Italy. Some courses will include local cultural activities, and students have the freedom to choose at which campus and when they would like to study.
